RESTING IN MIDAIR.

Faculty of Poising Possessed by Some of the Largest Birds.

"While I never have seen it explained in print," said one of the ornithological sharps of the zoo, "it is a wonder to me persons should express amazement at the ability of certain birds to hang poised in the air without wing motion. It is a favorite trick of the great condor. Away in the air, far beyond the mountain tops, these birds hang poised as motionless as if perched on solid rock. True, their wings are outstretched, but even through glasses not the slightest motion is perceptible. They remain in this position for many minutes, sometimes for an hour, making a careful scrutiny of everything below them in their search for prey. Then, with a slight tilting of the wings, they flap slowly away, or, having found what they were seeking, dart like a bullet toward it. The eagle, hawk and other species have this same faculty of poising apparently on nothing.

"These birds move about until they meet an uprising current of air. It may come from immediately beneath them, from wind deflected by striking a cliff along the sea, or may come from a great distance, where a rushing wind struck the side of a mountain and was turned upward. Being on the wing most of the time in search of prey, they have learned to utilize these uprushing air currents for their own purposes. Coming to one of these and landing to the wind, they fix their pinions at an angle which will permit them to rest there and scrutinize something that has taken their attention perhaps on the plain below. Thus, while they seem poised on nothing, the air current rushing upward buoy's them.

"You see the same thing in mid-ocean when ships are followed by flocks of gulls, in some rare case clear across the ocean. When the ships start out the gulls fly here and there, sometimes away on high and again skimming the surface of the water in search of food. As the hours and days pass they tire, and then you will see them poise for rest on the air current rising from the stern of the ship. The onrush of an ocean greyhound creates a swiftly rising air current in its wake. This curls over like a wave and rushes into the vacuum made by the steamer, and on it the gulls are carried along without effort and at the same speed at which the ship is traveling."—New York Press.

SCIENCE SIFTINGS.

Uranus is the only one of our system of planets which rotates backward.

Glycerin has the property, extraordinary among liquids, of not evaporating.

The star Canopus surpasses the sun in brightness by more than 10,000 times.

The equator of Mars is inclined to the plane of its orbit about 25 degrees. That of the earth is inclined 23 degrees 24 minutes.

The different worlds of the solar family are at different stages of their evolution. If the moon is a walf of the past, Jupiter is a world of the future.

The electrical charge of the gaseous ion is .00000000034 electrostatic units. The number of molecules in one cubic centimeter of gas under standard conditions is 3.6 multiplied by the nineteenth power of 10.

Such common substances as sugar, glucose and chalk having been found to absorb sunlight all day and to give it off in rays during the night, the discovery of some means for rendering those rays useful in illuminating houses at night with little expense seems a possibility of the near future.

Bearded Women.

Bearded women have existed at all periods of the world's history. Even Herodotus, the "father of history," gives us an account of one Pedasnes, "who lived above Halcarnassus," a priestess of Minerva, whose chin regularly budded with a large beard when ever any great public calamity impended. Bartel Garetti, a woman of Copenhagen, had a beard reaching to her waist. Charles XII. of Sweden had a female grenadier in his army who possessed the beard as well as the courage of a man. Margaret, duchess of Austria and governess of the Netherlands, had a large, wiry, stiff beard, of which she was very proud. Of late years Albert, duke of Bavaria, reports having had a young lady governess in his household who was "the prond possessor of a very large black beard."

Development of the Walking Stick.

Probably the patriarch's staff was the first adaptation of the walking stick, and from its first inception to the present day it has undergone almost endless changes. In 1701 footmen attending gentlemen were forbidden to carry swords, these being replaced by a porter's staff. Thirty years later gentlemen were forbidden to carry swords, but allowed to carry large oak sticks. Before many years varnished and polished woods with ornamental heads came into use and in one form or another have held their own in public popularity.

The Beam Is There.

"Remember," admonished the reverend gentleman, "when you begin to notice the mote in your neighbor's eye there is pretty certain to be a beam in your own."

"That's right," replied Sinnickson. "It makes the average man's whole face beam to find a mote in his neighbor's eye."—Exchange.

Dos Riales Versus Dos Reales.

E. H. Williams & Co have a sign in the window, two pairs of sox for Dos Riales with a quarter of a dollar drawn on the card. W. T. Wells questioned the spelling and said "Dos Reals" was right and not Dos Riales, and offered to bet Phil Helmig of the store, cigars for the crowd that he was right. Mr. Helmig said that he consulted three Mexicans, one being a Mexican teacher, before he made the card and they said Dos Riales was right, but he didn't have the nerve to bet as Mr. Wells seemed determined that he was right. The question is, is there an i where an e ought to be or an e where i ought to be. Which is it?
